Collaborative Instructional and Assessment Practices National Institute

teamUP

PRESENTERS:

Margo Gottlieb, Ph.D. Co-Founder & Lead Developer, WIDA

Margo is an internationally recognized expert and author in the assessment of language learners. She has written over 90 articles and books on subjects ranging from academic language use to curriculum development.

Andrea Honigsfeld, Ed.D. Education Professor & Author

Andrea works in the areas of diversity, social justice and equity, primarily focusing on effective differentiated strategies and collaborative practices for English learners. She is author or coauthor of over 20 books on coteaching, teacher collaboration, and ESL strategies.

DESCRIPTION:

Continuous classroom data from assessment as and for learning are helpful to educators and multilingual learners alike. Feedback to and among multilingual learners pushes their learning forward and feedback from educator to educator improves instructional practices. We invite teams of educators to participate in our interactive workshop to explore the processes for planning collaborative instruction and assessment for their specific context. The institute includes a reception and discussion with the authors where we discuss individual teams' questions and quandaries.

PARTICIPANTS:

Option #1 (elementary): K-5 directors, coordinators, educators in district/school teams (coaches, lead teachers, classroom teachers in gen. ed., ESL, bilingual and dual language programs)
